

---

From: "Rebecca Sapora-Day" <rsapora@RCI.RUTGERS.EDU>
To: <CHARACTER_EDUCATION_NETWORK@EMAIL.RUTGERS.EDU>
Sent: Monday, January 10, 2005 12:27 PM
Subject: CORRECTION - Martin Luther King, Jr. Day Resources

Please note the following correction:

- To download a copy of Anthony Welch's book, please visit: <http://www.todreamagain.com>

Also, we were experiencing some trouble with our last listserve mailing and we apologize if you received multiple copies.

Dear Character Education Network Members:

There are two resources that may be useful for reflection and student activities associated with birthday celebrations of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday observance:

> To Dream Again: The Continuing Challenge of Martin Luther King, Jr. is a wonderful, brief book that can help reconnect each of us to Dr. King's inspiring work in ways that celebrate his life and positively change our own. The book, imagines what Dr. King would say to us now, as we face the difficulties of this new century. In addition, the book includes an action guide with specific tools and strategies that each of us can utilize immediately to improve our lives and world.

The author, Anthony Welch, has kindly offered the book as a free download from his website. NJCCE encourages you to download a free copy of the book at <http://www.todreamagain.com>. Other educators have found this to be a useful book as a resource for integration into the social studies and history curriculum, as well as. NJCCE would be interested in hearing from you regarding how you have used this resource.

> The youth leadership organization, Do Something, has issued its annual resources and contest encouraging students to perform acts of kindness and justice in tribute to the spirit and memory of Dr. King. Please visit their website at <http://www.dosomething.org/challenges/kj/>. New Jersey schools have traditionally registered thousands of acts through this program, which is a meaningful addition to other service learning and community service programs. The website includes access to curriculum materials appropriate for students different grade levels.

The regular edition of the Character Education Network newsletter will be mailed later in January.

Philip M. Brown, Ph.D.
Director
NJ Center for Character Education